based on my research, it seems reasonable to believe that my testosterone dropped significantly, while my cortisol rose, as a result of low-carb.

what we can learn from this is that once you get past a certain threshold, your brain adapts and even embraces the task you're working on

i love these little red lights could be easily cleaned up

Based on my research, it seems reasonable to believe that my testosterone dropped significantly, while my cortisol rose, as a result of low-carb.

What we can learn from this is that once you get past a certain threshold, your brain adapts and even embraces the task you're working on.